

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to a method of detecting or quantifying a target nucleic acid present in a specimen. The present invention provides a method of detecting or quantifying a target nucleic acid by 5 using artificially-designed probes having a flag consisting of a plurality of units, thereby easily and accurately detecting the target nucleic acid.